15-month Master's degree for working professionals: Alternating weekend classes with a distance learning option

Courses are led by UT Austin's best and brightest faculty and cover topics such as leadership, ethics, communication, change management, and decision-making

Practice-oriented curriculum draws on disciplines in the humanities and social and behavioral sciences, including psychology, sociology, rhetoric, philosophy, literature, and anthropology

No exams: Assessments are designed to provide students with practical skills for professional success

Each cohort consists of experienced professionals from diverse range of fields, allowing for an exchange of problems and solutions across sectors

Students complete a Capstone Project, allowing them to draw on what they've learned to tackle an organizational problem of their choice

Multidisciplinary approach develops students into well-rounded "internal consultants," ready to tackle a wide range of organizational challenges

HDO is a first-of-its-kind-in-the-nation program, and after being in existence for only a few years, several other universities are already seeking to emulate HDO's success

HDO also offers One-Day Seminars, Certificate Programs, and Custom Training for groups and individuals
