Meetings, Motivation and Change
Design Elements of Meetings for Engagement and Growth

Trent Sultemeier, Master of Arts Candidate, Human Dimensions of Organizations

Introduction
- Meetings help establish expectations for employee participation coming together and key work practices
- Meetings have an outsized influence on an organization’s success
- What tools do meeting organizers use in order to help run effective meetings?
- How can organizational change be addressed in meetings?

Methods
- Semi-structured interviews with 11 employees at design and technology companies
- Topics centered on characteristics of meetings focused on organizational change
- Participants included executives, team leaders, facilitation specialists and individual contributors

Results
The key design characteristics of space, facilitation, agenda and attendees support a meeting’s purpose or focus

Conclusions
- Meeting design is not one-size fits all and should be modified in the service of a clear focus
- Once a clear focus is developed, the design of a meeting, including inviting only necessary attendees, creating an agenda, facilitation techniques and ensuring the proper space should follow
- Employee engagement is fostered by clearly demonstrating expectations and providing opportunity for autonomy, competence and relatedness
- Virtual or hybrid meetings should modify their design to ensure all participants can fully participate
- Ensure an opportunity for voice by breaking into properly facilitated smaller groups

Literature Cited

Acknowledgments
A big thank you to Joyce and all the family for their support. Also, my great advisors, Clay Spinuzzi and Elizabeth Keating. Thanks to all the professors and my amazing HDO class!!

Contact Information
Trent Sultemeier, Trent@atmowork.com